Dear Traveler,

I'm pleased to announce that for the first time since March of 2020, our entire fleet is back on the water, taking guests to the far corners of our planet on vessels that feature between just 14 and 81 cabins with plenty of solo cabins on many of them. Our ships are, of course, not the only vessels out at sea these days—recently, there has been an explosion of new ships entering the expedition cruise world.

It's probably not much debated among people familiar with the expedition cruise niche that Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic has the most experienced expedition teams and mariners in the world, and that's because we have been exclusively engaged in expedition travel for over half a century. Naturally, in this time, we have learned a great deal about geography, weather conditions, and what works and doesn't work. These elements all contribute to the value of your expedition—but one of the most significant factors in your experience is the size of the vessel you travel on.

When you look through these pages, you will find all kinds of ships. What they have in common is that each carries a relatively small number of guests. When we contemplate building, acquiring, or chartering a ship, we think about where it's going and what its purpose is, and guest capacity is a critical part of the conversation. Captains, expedition leaders, naturalists, engineers, and executives all weigh in to determine a limit that allows us to use your time well, safely and enjoyably manage a variety of activities, and ensure that our presence is not intrusive.

Of course, cost is the downside to a smaller number of guests. If you build ships with two, three or four times the carrying capacity of our ships, they are more economical; however, that creates another kind of cost, diluting the value of time—more people, more waiting, less time exploring your destination. Ultimately, you must make your own value judgment on the cost. Size and expedition excellence is not all we focus on—our ships are rather elegant as well, providing wonderful food, exceptional comfort, and a decades-long commitment to providing the highest level of service.

In the following pages you can explore an almost dizzying array of uniquely immersive voyages around the world. Regardless of where you choose to explore, what I promise is that we are laser focused on you—your aspirations and your time. We understand deeply what it takes to create meaningful expeditions, while at the same time seeking out creative and effective ways to be good stewards of our planet.

Although I have been the CEO of this company for more than 40 years, my first two decades combined that role with the responsibilities of an expedition leader. I feel so good about our rootedness; our teams; our collective enthusiasm; our love for nature, culture, and history; and above all our principles, the first one being: ensure that everything we do adds value to the guest experience.

I hope you choose to join us out there soon.

Sincerely,

Sven-Olof Lindblad

New Expeditions & Additional Departures

We are pleased to announce that 2025 and 2026 departures are now available for booking, including on a range of compelling new voyages that will take travelers along the Nile, through the Pacific Northwest, and beyond.

Next year, Food & Wine and Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic are launching an exclusive new collaboration to take travelers on an immersive culinary journey along the Columbia and Snake Rivers. Traveling aboard National Geographic Sea Bird or National Geographic Sea Lion, enjoy unique culinary experiences that bring you straight to the source of the Pacific Northwest's wild bounty. Along the way, guests will sample wines personally selected by Food & Wine magazine editors and travel with experts who will guide you through the region's diverse terroirs.

FOOD&WINE

Lindblad Expeditions is also joining forces with National Geographic to enhance and expand our travel experiences in Egypt. Beginning in 2024, National Geographic Experts—such as archaeologists or National Geographic Photography Experts—accompany select Egypt journeys to help us unearth the stories of this ancient civilization. Following the onset of this alliance, we will debut a new, nine-day expedition for 2025. Spend four days exploring the Nile aboard our newly chartered ship, Sun Goddess—a stylish vessel that channels a boutique Cairene hotel. In addition to this new expedition, we have added more 2024 departures of our classic 12-day journey, Passage Through Egypt aboard Oberoi Philae.

New Sea Cloud II expeditions include several 2024 journeys to Italy, Croatia, and Slovenia. By popular demand, we are also bringing back a selection of celebrated voyages from past expedition seasons for 2025. Our polar ships will once again sail Wild Coasts of Argentina, South Georgia, & the Falklands and Svalbard in Spring: Polar Bears, Arctic Light & Epic Ice.

Iceland With the Family: The Ultimate Expedition Experience

Nurturing Young Explorers

Join us on a summer departure of A Circumnavigation of Iceland or Wild Iceland Escape and your kids and teens can participate in an interactive program that teaches young travelers 18 and under how to explore like scientists and tell the stories of their surroundings through photographs, videos, drawings, and more. Throughout their journey, they are led by certified field educators—inspiring mentors who help them connect with nature in a deeper way, sending them home with a newfound passion for the planet that lasts a lifetime.

Exploration for Every Generation

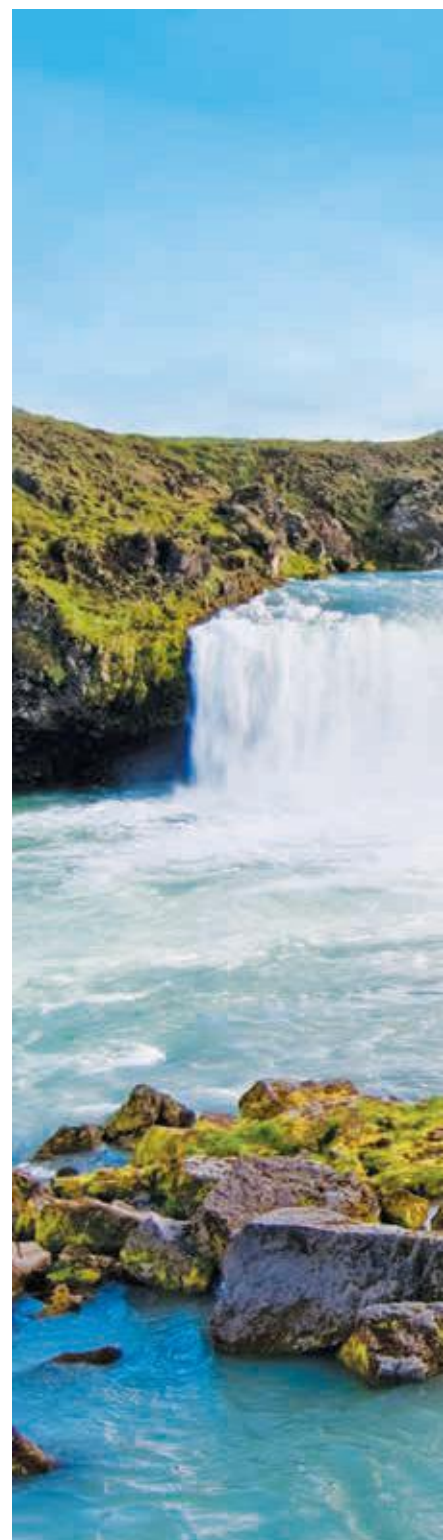

In 2024, we are offering additional departures of A Circumnavigation of Iceland and Wild Iceland Escape to accommodate more multi-generational families.

These expeditions have something for everyone: the grade schooler fascinated by Vikings and Icelandic folklore, the teenager or college grad with a newfound interest in the climate sciences, the grandparent who wants to watch for puffins. Each voyage offers a range of activities, from leisurely photo walks along volcanic beaches to vigorous waterfall hikes and 4x4 rides through the remote highlands. Whichever way you choose to explore, you will discover fascinating places as a family and bond over the memories of your expedition for years to come.

Discover Iceland With Ease

The wilds of Iceland are easier to access than ever before, with a host of nonstop flights to and from cities across the United States. Fly from the eastern seaboard to Reykjavik in just over five hours and find yourself in an otherworldly realm of glistening glaciers and gushing geysers. Exploring aboard our fleet, you'll enjoy the added ease of unpacking once and letting us take you from one destination to the next, along wild coastlines brimming with natural wonders.

Iceland is the ideal destination for adventurous families—a land of geological extremes where Earth’s drama unfolds around every corner. In 2024, we will begin offering our exclusive program for young explorers in Iceland, along with more departures of our most popular Iceland expeditions so that you can explore this dynamic destination with your entire crew.

Goðafoss Waterfall, Iceland.

Enhancing Your Expedition Experience

Your passion for exploration inspires us to seek out new ways to enhance your travel experience—from upgrading our amenities and expedition ships to designing new journeys in destinations you long to discover.

Newly enhanced Cat. 7 suite,
National Geographic Explorer.

Suite Exclusives

Our new Suite Exclusives package gives guests staying in eligible cabins access to an array of amenities designed to enhance your on-board experience, including priority booking for spa treatments and igloo stays (on select ships), an in-room espresso maker, complimentary laundry, and other exclusive perks.

Enhancements to Our Polar Fleet

We are thrilled to announce that our popular polar sister ships, National Geographic Endurance and National Geographic Resolution, have each been outfitted with additional cabins to accommodate more travelers. Now, up to 138 guests can sail aboard these in-demand vessels in epic destinations from Antarctica to Greenland and beyond.

National Geographic Explorer has also debuted a new look. Her suites were recently enhanced with the sleek, Scandinavian design that has become the hallmark of our polar fleet, as well as Command Centers that allow guests to explore from the comfort of their cabins with a curated set of exploration tools.

Stay Connected With Starlink

Get your Wi-Fi connection at sea with Starlink, the world's largest satellite constellation. This year we are rolling out Starlink across our fleet of expedition ships. Starlink will provide a more reliable internet connection and better coverage on our remote itineraries.

Cheers! On-Board Beverages Celebrate

There's no better way to kick off a voyage than with a glass of bubbly or a cocktail. Make that drink one that speaks to your destination and you've just elevated your entire travel experience. With new beverage perks—including unlimited alcoholic drinks across the entire fleet beginning in 2024—as well as immersive culinary experiences, Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic is giving travelers more reason than ever to raise a toast.*

Each evening on expedition, when you gather for a recap of the day's adventures, you can look forward to a specially crafted cocktail—full strength or zero-proof—that your bartender has dreamed up as a nod to your travel region. That might mean toasting with a gin and tonic off the Cornish coast, sipping a zero-proof highball that captures the color of a famous iceberg, or savoring a sparkling drink made with local fruits. That destination-driven ethos extends to each ship's wine and beer selection, which features local bottles and draughts wherever possible.

Guests can also enjoy singular experiences on and off ship that highlight local beverages. On-board beer, wine, and spirit tastings are a favorite no matter the destination.

Shore excursions, meanwhile, offer a firsthand look at a region's wineries and distilleries, and a chance to meet with passionate local experts. Guests in Alaska, for instance, can visit the pint-sized Port Chilkoot Distillery and learn how the pure tasting notes of local spring water give their vodka its ultra-clean finish.

Sustainability is always a consideration for Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic, and the beverages served are no exception. "We find spirits that speak to our mission," says Ana Esteves, Vice President of Hotel Operations. On West Coast itineraries, you may encounter Gothic Gin, which partners with conservation groups like Fins Attached. "They give to the whale and research communities—we know that every bottle we're buying contributes to a good cause," says Esteves.

Dynamic culinary experiences, too, offer a chance for thoughtful pairings. On the National Geographic Resolution and National Geographic Endurance, special dinners delve into the history of exploration through a refined seven-course tasting menu, complete with two wine pairings from local or sustainably minded growers. Finish your meal with a nightcap that nods to the theme of the evening—on the National Geographic Endurance, which takes its name from Ernest Shackleton's ship, you might sip a whiskey-based drink and learn how whiskey was both a vital tool and welcome indulgence for early polar explorers fighting the bitter cold.

*Super-premium wines and spirits are available for an additional charge.

Expedition Cruising for Solo Travelers

If setting out solo to a place like Australia or the Galápagos seems intimidating, an expedition cruise could be your answer. Step aboard the Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic fleet and become part of a welcoming family of like-minded travelers and engaging experts driven by a passion for exploration.

❖ Why are expedition cruises a good fit for solo travelers?

Expedition cruises offer the opportunity to explore alongside people who share your curiosity about the world. Travelers are excited to get to know one another—it's part of the instinct for discovery that brought them on board. And yet, there is enough flexibility to do your own thing when you feel inclined.

❖ What happens when travelers arrive in the departure city?

You are taken care of from the time you touch down in your embarkation city to the moment you are returned back to the airport. We can work with you to book the most direct flights, and once you arrive at your destination, a Lindblad representative will be waiting to escort you to the next leg of your journey.

❖ How does the dining experience work?

The dining room has an open seating policy, meaning you'll never have to eat alone—unless, of course, you choose to. Simply pick a table you would like to join. Maybe find a familiar face from the day's Zodiac outing or sit with your favorite naturalist.

❖ Can you participate in all activities if you're a solo traveler?

Daily adventures are designed to be flexible and inclusive for every guest. In fact, couples or families sometimes split up to pursue their individual interests, so there are often several travelers looking for a kayak partner or a snorkeling buddy.

❖ Do solo travelers stay in single cabins or can they share with other guests?

All our ships have options for solo travelers. Some vessels feature dedicated solo cabins, while on others you might stay alone in a double cabin. If you are looking to share accommodations, let our Expedition Specialists know when you call to make your reservation.

❖ What are some of the best trips for solo travelers?

All of our expeditions provide a rewarding experience for the solo traveler. Choose a trip based on the destination that fascinates you, knowing that the rest will fall into place. Each voyage is an opportunity to experience something outside your comfort zone within a completely safe and friendly community.

A Life at Sea With Captain Heidi Norling

"I will always want to be close to the sea," declares Captain Heidi Norling. In the decades since graduating from maritime academy, she has realized this dream, moving up the ranks of cargo ships, ferries, and passenger vessels before achieving the role of Captain of National Geographic Resolution. Here, Captain Norling shares her journey as a mariner and how she became the first female captain for the Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic fleet.

Captains Heidi Norling and Martin Graser at the christening of the National Geographic Resolution in Antarctica.

❖ When did you fall in love with the ocean?

When I was growing up in Sweden, my father had a small sailing boat for the archipelago. He would say, 'We don't need charts. I know this water.' And then, boom—we would run aground. After that, the two of us took an evening class on maritime navigation, where I learned about nautical chart projections and navigational chart symbols. I was drawn to the freedom of being out on the water.

❖ How did your career begin?

After attending the Kalmar Maritime Academy, I worked cargo ships. My first big captain opportunity was for a ferry in the Baltic Sea. That's where I saw my dream ship: National Geographic Orion. I called the ship's captain, Martin Graser, and he offered me the job of staff captain. When Captain Graser left National Geographic Orion, I became captain.

❖ What led you to National Geographic Resolution?

I was still working on National Geographic Orion when I received the call to be second captain—and the godmother—of National Geographic Resolution. It was an incredible offer to come to a completely new, tailor-made ship—and I got to attend the ship's christening in Antarctica.

❖ In layman's terms, how does National Geographic Resolution's technology facilitate expeditions?

National Geographic Resolution is a powerful ship designed for polar expeditions. She has Azipod propulsion, meaning two propellers at the stern can turn the ship 360 degrees around her own axis. This is especially useful in icy waters.

❖ How are small-ship expeditions different from other forms of travel?

There is more freedom, which leads to more adventure. If wildlife is spotted, for example, we have the flexibility to stop the ship. Given the small, nimble scale of our vessels, we can get close to the shore and access narrow, more remote passages.

❖ In your role as captain, how do you hope to inspire younger women?

At first, I didn't think about this because I grew up in Sweden, where no one says you can't do something because you're a woman. Then I met an eight-year-old girl who couldn't believe I was a navigational officer—she said, 'but you're a woman.' I realized it's good to be visible so people know that women can do this job too.

“I was drawn to the freedom of being out on the water.”

National Geographic Endurance & National Geographic Resolution

These next-generation expedition ships are truly in a class of their own—fully stabilized, highly strengthened, and rated in a top-tier ice class category (Polar Code 5 Category A). They are able to navigate polar passages year-round and safely explore uncharted waters, and the wave-slicing technology of the patented X-bow® ensures the smoothest ride possible. NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC ENDURANCE

INTRODUCING NATIONAL GEOG

RAPHIC ENDURANCE

This ship will be the most remarkable polar expedition ship ever built on a multitude of levels, including a commitment to expedition excellence over scale, carrying just 126 guests.

—SVEN LINDBLAD, CEO & PRESIDENT, LINDBLAD EXPEDITIONS

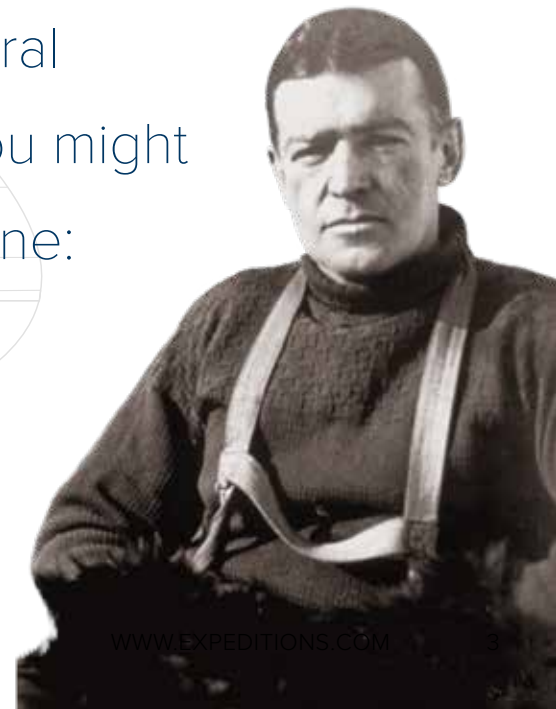

Svalbard, Norway, Sven's reconnaissance trip, March 2018.

The first new polar build in our 50-year history, National Geographic Endurance, named to honor legendary explorer Ernest Shackleton, is a fully stabilized beast of a ship with the highest ice class (PC5 Category A) of any purpose-built passenger vessel. The National Geographic Endurance will provide unprecedented access, opening up unexplored opportunities in polar environments. She boasts other unprecedented technical and design features, too, plus grandly proportioned spaces and places, as you'll see ahead. We invite you to join us on one, or more, of our 2020 inaugural voyages. Depending on which you choose, you might be able to legitimately paraphrase this iconic line:

"To boldly go where no man has gone before."

Polar bear in spring light, Svalbard, Norway.

National Geographic Endurance's patented X-Bow® hull was originally created for offshore supply vessels in the North Sea with the goal of maintaining speed and comfort in some of the world's wildest seas.

—CAPT. LEIF SKOG, VP NAUTICAL OPERATIONS

THE POWER TO GO WHERE AWESOME LIVES

The most striking feature of National Geographic Endurance is her distinctive profile, resulting from the patented X-Bow®. The X-Bow was introduced by our Norwegian shipbuilder, Ulstein, and as Captain Skog mentioned, this unique design is envisioned to combine speed with comfort. The X-Bow affords the smoothest, most comfortable ride imaginable, in all conditions. And the smoother ride results in greater fuel efficiency and fewer emissions for reduced environmental impact, as well. Equally, the X-Bow design also significantly increases the joy of observing wildlife, enabling optimal forward and straight down-the-sides viewing—no leaning out over the deck rail required. The unobstructed downward sight lines, plus multiple walk-out areas from the Bridge, and Observation Lounge, and glass rails on the top deck create superb conditions for viewing and photography.

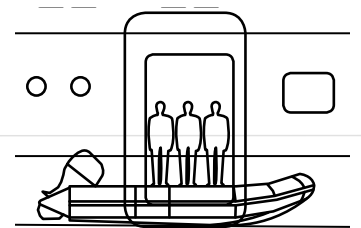

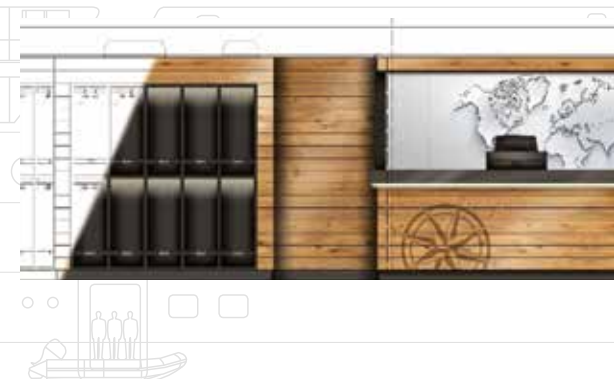

The patented X-Bow® makes polar travel safe, smooth and thrilling.

This ship embodies every innovation and validates every concept we've developed in over 50+ years of pioneering expedition travel. Our expedition teams will be able to use every aspect of Endurance's design and capabilities to create undreamed of opportunities for guests.

—SHAUN POWELL, FIELD STAFF & EXPEDITION OPERATIONS MANAGER

We can truly meet and exceed every expectation on National Geographic Endurance.

—BRUCE TSCHAMPEL, VICE PRESIDENT HOTEL OPERATIONS

Clockwise from left: C. Green's, one of three dining options, features custom-grilled and lighter fare for breakfast, lunch or dinner; a pair of elevators makes it easy to navigate the decks and grander reaches of Endurance; Reception, near the gangway for ease during transition times, offers a peaceful place for personal transactions during the voyage.

THE LUXURY OF COMFORT OUTSIDE THE ZONE

Sleek and powerful on the outside, National Geographic Endurance is quietly luxe in the best Scandinavian design tradition on the inside. From the streamlined modernism of her welcoming Reception and the distinctive style of her elevators and staircase, to the cossetting comfort of her public and private spaces, Endurance's demeanor is gracious dedication to your ease. With a total of six guest decks, Endurance has over 10,000 square feet of glass to frame the spectacular polar scenery she transits—keeping you constantly connected to the view, while her considered décor and amenities, as you'll see, keep you, and just 125 fellow passengers, spaciouly and contentedly contained.

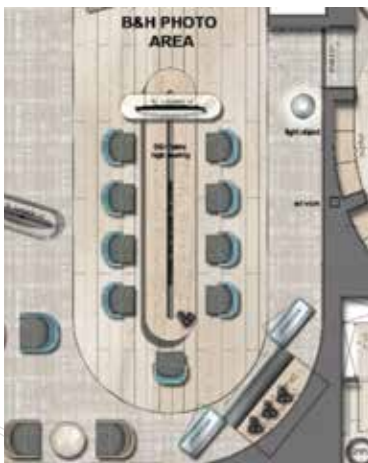

Unabashedly beautiful and luxuriously appointed, National Geographic Endurance's interiors are superlative from a design and hospitality perspective. They uphold our traditions: making community (the Lounge) and insight (the 'Circle of Truth' podium) the center of expedition life.

—SVEN LINDBLAD, CEO & PRESIDENT, LINDBLAD EXPEDITIONS

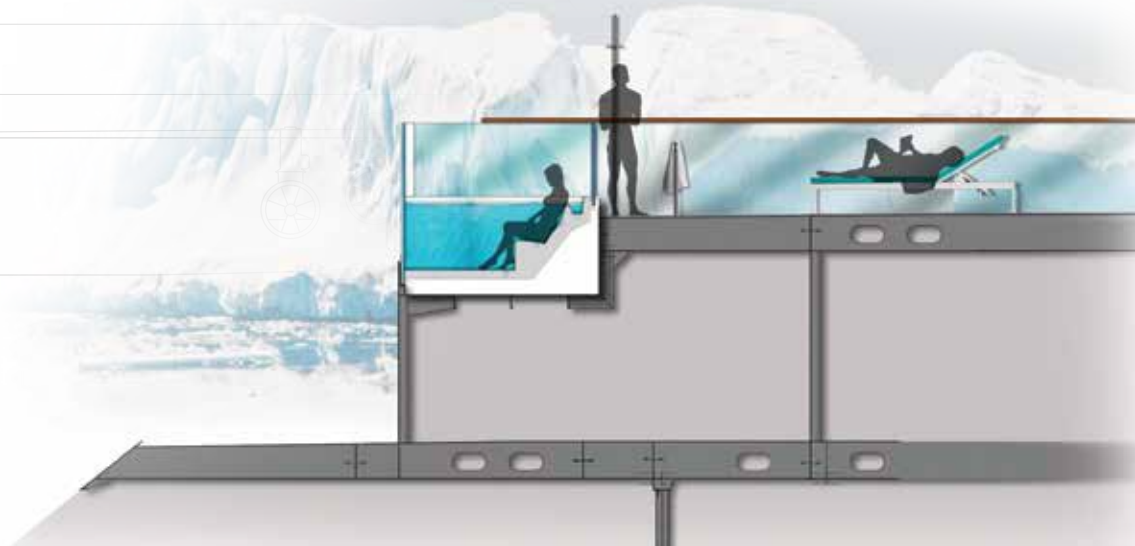

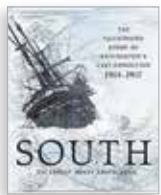

Clockwise from top left: The Ice Lounge is the expedition community hub for Recap, talks, presentations and sociability; photographers have a new share-and-learn space, with a B&H Photo Gear Locker for trying new tech; few hot tubs can offer a more thrilling backdrop than these aboard Endurance; and The Den is the warm heart of the Observation Deck.

FIRE & ICE ARE AT THE HEART OF ENDURANCE

When you're in remote polar regions, it's nice to have your mother ship, library, restaurant, café, favorite bar, haven for intellectual stimulation, and comfortable bed at hand. Especially when every detail is designed for your enjoyment. Fire and ice are twin themes throughout Endurance, in the color schemes and the feelings engendered by her spaces—from the 'chill' cool of the Ice Lounge, to the conversation-kindling warmth of The Den. Photographers will love their purpose-designed zone, created expressly for critiques and laptop gallery sessions, anchored by handsome cabinetry to house the B&H Photo Gear Locker, where exciting new gear for you to try out lives. A thrilling 'habitat' is located on the outside aft deck where twin infinity hot tubs defy the ice with radiant warmth.

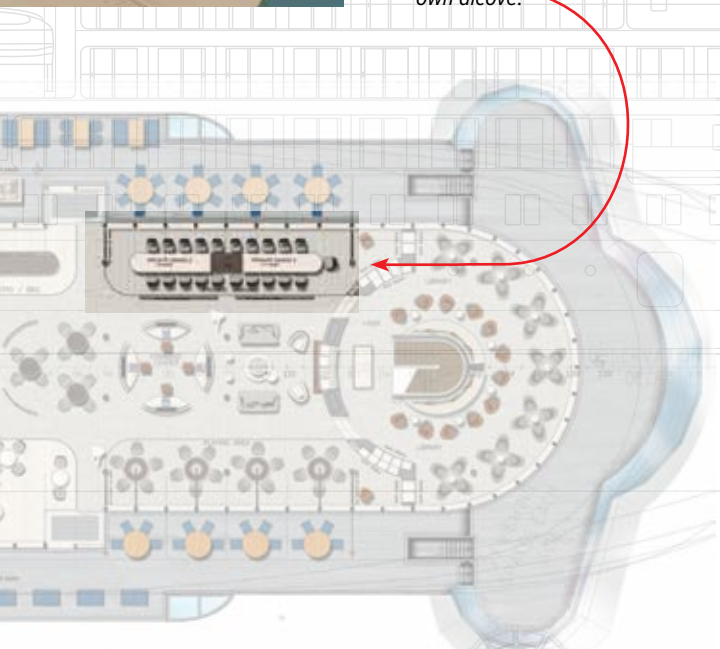

“Breakfast at 8 a.m. consisted of a pannikin of hot hoosh made from Bovril sledging ration, two biscuits and some lumps of sugar. Lunch came at 1 p.m. and comprised Bovril sledging ration, eaten raw, and a pannikin of hot milk... Tea, at 5 p.m. had the same menu...The meals were the bright beacon...The glow of warmth and comfort produced by the food and drink made optimists of us all.”

Green's (larger rendering on pg 8), located within The Den, offers breakfast, lunch and dinner fare on the light side. TASTE: ANOTHER WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Dining aboard National Geographic Endurance in polar regions will be a far cry from what Shackleton experienced. Menus and choices will make “optimists of us all,” every day. Restaurant Two Seven Zero° surrounds superb dining with stellar views, and provides a window on vital expedition team members—our galley staff.

C. Green's, named for Shackleton's cook, offers an early riser breakfast, fresh salads and lighter fare, plus custom grilled selections at lunch and dinner.

The Chef's Table is an innovative approach to private dining. Over the course of each voyage, all guests aboard will be hosted by our Chef.

Intimate and interactive, each dinner features ‘polar theater’ in the form of regionally inspired, sustainable, and inventive food.

In addition, daily high tea, hors d'oeuvres at Recap, and

BBQs in the Winter Garden (not shown) for al fresco dining in complete comfort, promise ‘anything but deprivation’ during our Endurance expeditions.

YOUR POLAR SANCTUARY

Polar exploration history is fraught with stories of hardship, deprivation and struggle. In juxtaposition to what's gone before, Endurance offers a bastion of wellness. The Sanctuary takes a page out of Roald Amundsen's playbook (the sole explorer who made the race to the South Pole look athletic, graceful, more exhilarating than debilitating). It offers you the self-care options, and inspiration, to take yours to the next level. Discover spa treatments and therapies. Saunas, from high heat to milder to entertain you with stunning views. A panoply of training options in the gym. And a gorgeous yoga studio in which to greet each everlasting polar day.

To the extent our company has a mantra, it's the "tonic of wildness." We believe, as Henry David Thoreau did, in the healing power of wild places for the human spirit.

THE LUXURY OF COMFORT

Elegantly imagined, with a sense of limitless space effortlessly incorporated into the design, the 13 cossetting, extra large balcony suites (featured in this rendering) impart a feeling of serenity. Warm creams, oatmeal and coral, soft textures, round corners, art that invites the eye to linger and our signature feather duvets, plus a walk-in closet and roomy stone-clad baths make each suite a haven (and a refuge from the midnight sun, thanks to dark-out shades). Full-height windows and furnished balconies bring the scenery to you. And in the 56 standard cabins, azure accents meet polar vistas at the windows for a feeling of expansive yet cozy space (see page 39). Of the 56 standard cabins, 40 feature a balcony (including the 12 solo cabins). All of the 69 total cabins feature a Command Center, and either a comfortable sofa or reading chair.

Our authentic expedition heritage inspired the designers to create a Command Center, not simply a desk. Unique and useful.
